

Angularity, Light, & the Axis of Ambition

"The totality of the world always remained something radically discontinuous" (Panofsky).

Orthogonal mapping cannot capture the overlaps that allowed for these moments of alignment.

Lies
"To reduce the divine to a mere subject matter of human consciousness" (Panofsky). - it is always us closing light, not the other way around

Every day.

I run through an undulating Axis on the East Side

The Haas complex -- hours of meeting MBA's and networking

Approaching, nearer, the roof forms a perfect right angle in the vision

Entering, like a ship sailing towards you, slicing right through you

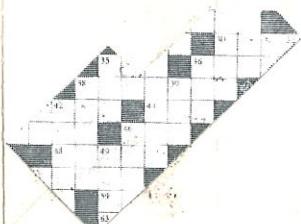

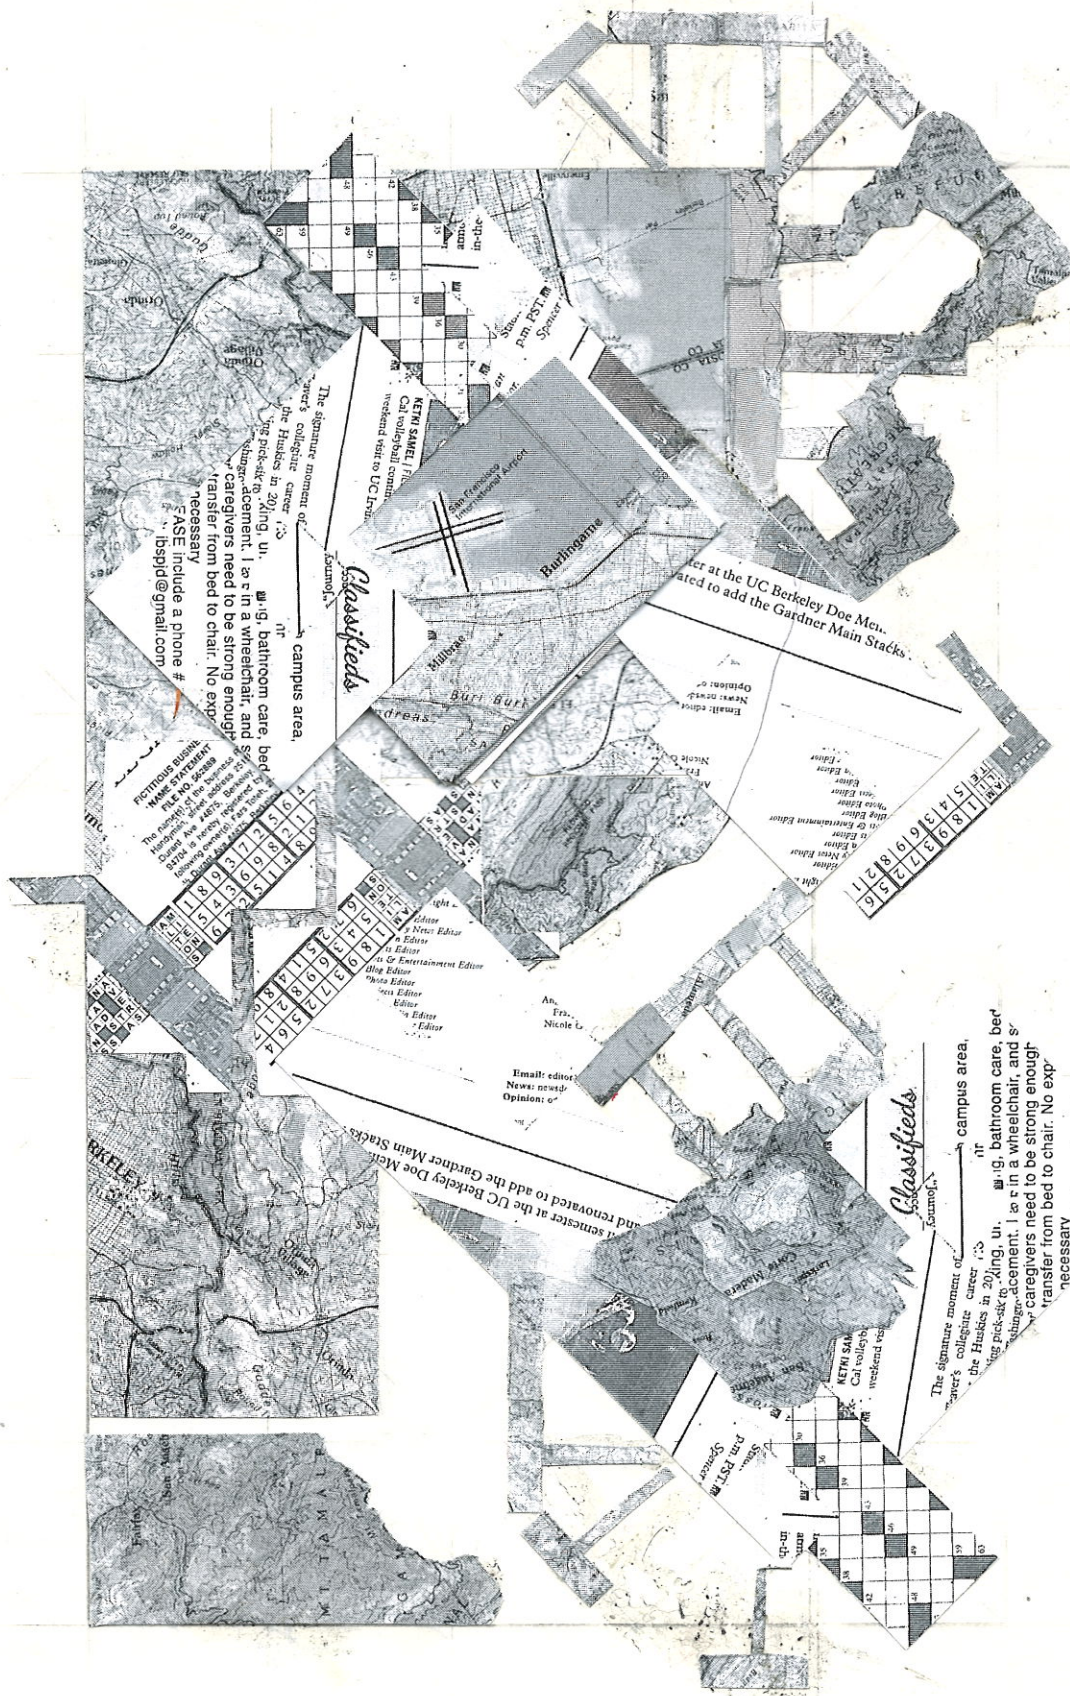

Blum Hall -- pitching to form a team for the next competition

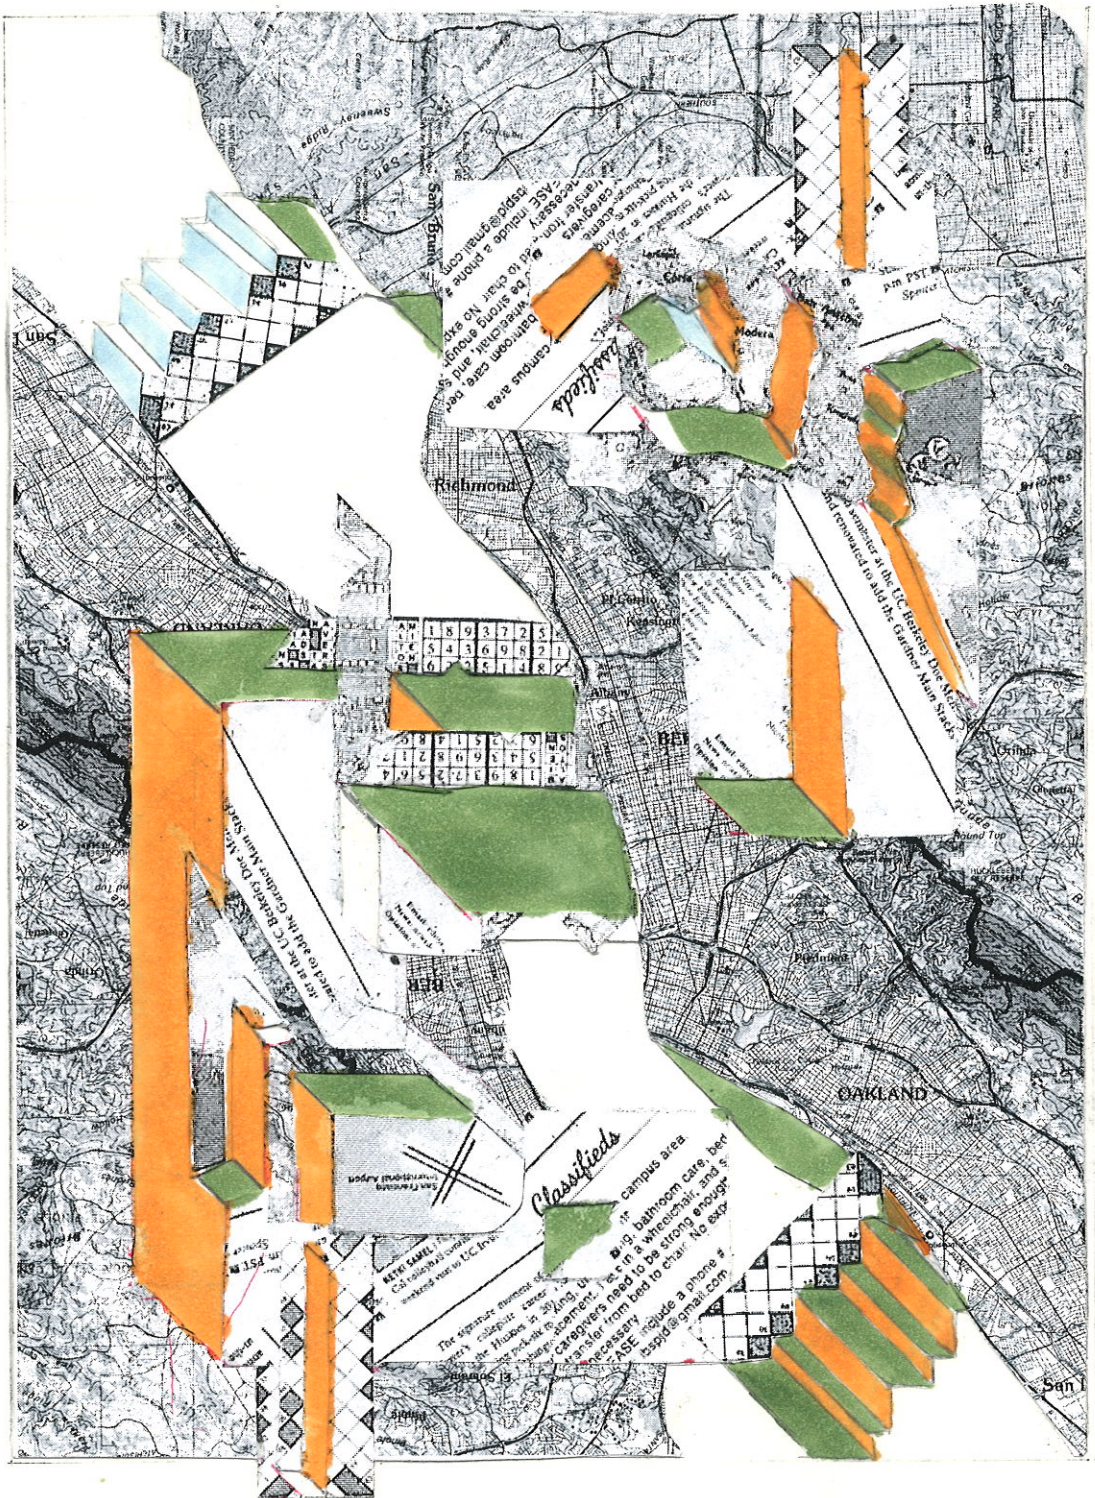

Like something about to burst

Like a new venture

Soda Hall -- just another line of code, of thought, of
